EARTH'S BEAUTY
by Jack Cameron

Have you ever stopped to notice
The beauty of the land From the soft sheen of the valleys
To the stately timberland?
How the mountains rise in splendor
Capped with peaks of sparkling snow Standing guard down thru the ages
Silently, on all below

Mighty rivers, turn and twisting Roaring down o'er rocks and lea, Rushing on in wild abandon In their journey to the sea.
Tranquil lakes and flowery meadows
Hold us in their magic spell,
Even birds and all the wild-life
Seem to have a tale to tell.

Flowers blooming on the hillside Springing from the fertile sod, Lift their fragrant faces upward Fashioned by the hand of God.
So should we in life's short journey
Scatter beauty where we go, Love and kindness, joy and laughter
In a flood-tide, let them flow.
