TACLE,

Fred Jones, hatter, of Leicester Square. Presents himself to you, And you may guess when he is dressed, OLgirls he knows a few. A widow fell in love with him, While riding in a train, She had a blessed boy with her. Who caused us both much pain.

(SPOKES.) - Yes, the confounded young urchin caused me a great deal of pain and sorrow; and the widow, his mother, introduced me to him as his Uncle! Fred Jones was never an Uncle before, and will never be again, not if he knows it. And the whole of the journey the mother said to the boy --

CHORUS :--"Tommy, make room for your uncle, There's a little dear !

Tommy, make room for your uncle. I want him to sit here. You know mamma has got a hun, And that she'll give to you.

So don't annoy, there's a good boy, Make room for your Uncle, do!" When first I met the firm of Green, Twas an my journey down
